

Win a Million!

Someone at tonight's World Show could walk away a millionaire.

Someone could win $1 million!

At the 2006 AQHA World Championship Show tonight, complete the card number on the Bank of America MasterCard, and if your eight numbers exactly match, in the order of the numbers on the secret card, you'll take home $1 million.

We're giving you half the numbers, now you take your best shot at the remaining numbers.

If no one gets the exact number, a random drawing of all entries will give one lucky person a $1,000 Bank of America gift card, and that person will become a finalist in the Ford Truck Giveaway!

Be one of the first 1,000 to enter the coliseum, and receive a special gift.

Bank of America night is full of action in the arena with finals performances in amateur heading and heeling, and amateur working cow horse.

Also, see which amateur exhibitor will be named Sooner Trailer All-Around Amateur. This deserving individual will take home a brand-new Sooner Trailer and, of course, the coveted title. This year, 34 amateurs will compete for the award. To see who's in the running, turn to page 3.

Low-Stress Cowboy

AQHA clinician Curt Pate comes to the World Show.

By Holly Clanahan

“Man, you’ve got to start getting tougher with them horses.”

That was one cowboy’s advice to trainer and clinician Curt Pate of Helena, Montana, after seeing his demonstrations of low-stress horse handling. Curt avoids fistfights with a horse, and he wants to keep the horse in balance, which means no pulling on the bit and no excessive bending.

“Well,” Curt replied to his critic, “do you not like the way my horses look?”

So, point taken: His may not be the “traditional” rough-and-tough way of starting colts, but it works. Quite well.

“It’s really satisfying to me,” Curt says of the methods he honed in part by scrutinizing Ray Hunt videos time and again. “I think what happens to us is we get so caught up in what everybody else is doing that we’re not really getting the self-satisfaction out of this deal. There is so much satisfaction from the horse.”

Both of Curt’s grandfathers were horse traders, so “I grew up riding everybody else’s rejects and trying to make them better,” he says. He found some mentors in local cowboys, and he later started colts for clients at night while working a day job as a ranch cowboy. He fell in with Buck Brannaman and began learning from him. He even worked with Buck as a technical adviser on the film “The Horse Whisperer.”

As his education continued, he realized that many people were quoting

Ray Hunt, who’s considered the father of natural horsemanship, but “nobody’s horses looked the same.”

“I just had to figure out why his were so much different,” Curt says. “I started watching videos over and over and over again, and I noticed that he never bends his horses when they are moving, and he never pulls on them. His hands are always in front of his saddle horn.”

Those are now Curt’s mantras.

Curt believes that working a bit in a horse’s mouth is a lot like shaking the hand of a friend. “If I reach out and shake your hand and I pull back, you automatically do the same thing,” he says. “The horse is going to lock his jaw in response to your pull. I want to use my fingers to massage the jaw to get him soft.”

Curt’s theories all tie in to the principal of keeping the stress level low for horses and humans, and even cattle when they’re involved.

“When a person decides to do some-

Curt Pate will offer an educational horse clinic from 10 a.m. to noon Saturday, November 11, at the Travel and Transportation Building at the State Fair Park.

thing, it’s low stress,” he says. “When they are forced to do something, it’s high stress. The animal is the same way, so whatever I’m trying to do, I’m trying to set it up where the animal decides to do it.”

But lowering a horse’s stress level can have a big payoff.

“Low stress can mean higher performance,” Curt says. “I think you can get your horses so much handier and so much better with this once you start understanding the physics of the horse and start learning what we’re doing (as riders) that’s causing problems.”

Winning Words

From the November 9 finals

“That’s the highest score I’ve ever marked on that horse, and if I’d have thought about that score, I wouldn’t have marked it. I just had to go show my horse with what I had.”

-J.B. Rutherford on marking a 219 to win the amateur cutting on his gelding Holidoc Mate.

“I love the babies. It’s the thrill, really, of not knowing what you’re going to have until it comes. It’s just a miracle to me every time one is born.”

-James Melvin Kifer after winning amateur yearling stallions with BR Eminence.

“That’s the most wonderful feeling in the world!”

-Frank Berris on bearing On The Red Carpet’s name called as world champion in amateur yearling mares.
